I love this game but the developers are not very good at running it. They have been content with staying small scale and niche for the better part of 15+ years now. Updates do happen however they are not very frequent. The dev team have failed to properly capitalize on the steam success and now the numbers have fallen drastically. The staff team itself is extremely allergic to any form of negative feedback or opposition. They will dismiss criticism and bad reviews on steam as "troll reviews" and completely nullify whatever actually decent feedback there could have been. They are stuck on their old ways and have no desire to change. They advertise a combat update as an "overhaul" when infact its barely a ui change. Its a good game ran by people who seem at best half interested in running it and at worst, locked on destroying it.
