The reason half the reviews are positive is because this game has had a core die-hard community for the past 15 years that have literally lived most of their life on this game.

However the hard truth is 90% of new players will not enjoy this game. It's very old, clunky and slow paced.

The majority of your time will be spent staring at loading bars because absolutely anything you want to accomplish is gated behind a repetition with a long action timer. You want to set up a base? Better take the next few months off work because you are going to need to stare at action timers 10 hours a day just to achieve even a basic set-up. Also fun fact- you have to pay real life money just to claim a piece of land or else everyone can take your stuff and it decays.

It also has an over-zealous moderation team that treat the in-game chat and discord like their personal chat room (I got perma banned for having this avatar). This selective banning may be what accounts for the fact that Wurm has one of the most depressing communities I've seen. I'd love to see data on the suicide rate of Wurm players because these are some truly miserable, humorless people. I guess it makes sense because you kind of have to have given up on life to resign your fate to sitting there all day clicking a button and watching a 20 second timer tick down for thousands of hours.

this is the best review. man if you say anything even slightly true to how big of an outdated left behind piece of Sh*t this game is... ALL 32 die hard 10 year players come out of the cracks like cockroaches and start chewing on your review. LUL

Wurm is a no meme zone. They aren't having it over there.

Although I disagree with the exaggeration of commitment required to build anything in the game, I do believe how heavy handed they can be about giving bans. The community and the staff are old or very "old head" if you will. Memes especially edgy memes are still offensive in their world, and one thing I know for sure is they are probably gonna have to ban 50% of anybody new from steam or adapt to those edgy memes lol.

@Nice Cuppa Tea The hat on the character's head in his avatar says, "Please be patient, I have autism" So it is very likely the moderators and/or an individual moderator has no sense of humor.

Although with a game like this and the playerbase it has, I also wouldn't be surprised if they saw anime, had flashbacks to the war, told each other that one of those insert old timey racial slur for Japanese person is on our game (all this via their telegraph network), and then spent a day 1 finger typing their complaint.

LucasR yes this game is for OAPs to run out the clock on their life. I respect that, you wont find a better game than Wurm for that.

Nice Cuppa Tea I was banned for having this avatar, I literally wrote it in the post. There was no other reason. They told me.

I've been playing Wurm for years and the community has been the best I've seen yet. Sure, the game is grindy, as most crafting MMOs are. But it's got an incomparable charm and depth.

You were banned for an offense you won't share with us, and wanted to lash out. Does that make your review objective?

You love this game and left bad review only because you died in pvp. LOL!!!

I know for a fact that most of this die-hard community are retired folk and that they take the game way too seriously. Yeah, not a fan. ☠️
