I've played the non-steam Wurm Online for many years, and have poured many thousands of hours into Wurm Unlimited so far - Of the two, go for Wurm Unlimited.

Why?

- 1: You won't have to deal with the devs and staff's behavior.
 - 2: It's a one time payment for life, instead of Wurm Online's subscription model.
 - 3: It's basically the same, depending on what server you join.
 - 4: If you're a casual, there's skill multiplier servers so you won't have to spend too much of your valuable game time grinding for grind's sake.
 - 5: Overall, the community is better, but that's a very subjective claim.
 - 6: Into modding? This is where it's at.
- Etc. Etc.

For cons, you miss out on future updates - But the only thing worthy so far that can't be replicated with mods easily is increased render distance and the new renderer in general. But if you come in expecting this game to look great, you're barking up the wrong old-ass tree.

"Steam just notified me a profile I reported had been "taken action" on."
Well that's a shame because it's not this one.

He posted it 40 times across my various pictures, reviews, etc; Some weird attempt at trolling that reflects very poorly on him considering I never bothered him whatsoever.

that's the big advantage of wu. the most server are individual, so it's the players choose to find the right setup for him self. and with the diversity, every one should find one, which fit to him.

I don't like the high skill/action multipliers and free deeds, nothing personal.
